LOS ANGELES (AP) — “Ted Lasso” wins best comedy series Emmy Award for 2nd year in a row. Warner Bros. Discovery Inc. (WBD)-owned HBO had a rich haul at the 2022 Primetime Emmy Awards announced late on Monday, while Apple, Inc’s AAPL TV+ also made its presence felt at the event that recognizes the best artistic and technical talent in the television industry.What Happened: HBO’s smash hit “The White Lotus” won the best-limited series. It was also a big night for its cast members, Murray Bartlett and Jennifer Coolidge. While Bartlett took home the Emmy for the best supporting actor in a limited series, Coolidge won the best supporting actress award. HBO’s “Succession” won the best drama series award. It tells the story of a dysfunctional family competing for wealth and power. Matthew Macfadyen, who acted in it, won the award for best supporting actor in a drama series.Jean Smart, who plays stand-up comedian Deborah Vance in HBO Max’s “Hacks,” won the Emmy for best actress in a comedy series.See also: Netflix Hosting Squid Game Reality Show: How To Apply And How Much You Can WinSquid Game’s Unique Distinction: Netflix, Inc.’s NFLX “Squid Game” won multiple awards and created history by becoming the first Korean series, and the first non-English language series, to win a major Primetime Emmy Award. South Korean actor Lee Jung-jae bagged the award for outstanding lead actor in a drama series, while its creator Hwang Dong-hyuk won the award for top director.A Bloomberg report suggested that by mid-October 2021, Squid Game generated an impact value of $891 million for Netflix compared to the production cost of $21 million.Netflix confirmed in June that Season 2 of the drama is coming up. At the 2022 Emmys, Dong-hyuk revealed that Jung-jae’s character, Seong Gi-hung, will seek revenge in the upcoming season, according to Deadline.Apple TV+’s Hits & Misses: “Ted Lasso” propelled Apple TV+ to the spotlight at the 74th Emmy Awards, as it won the best comedy series. Its actor Jason Sudeikis took home the award for best lead actor in a comedy series.Apple TV+ original “Severance” did not win in the top categories. It was nominated but could take home the awards for outstanding main title design and outstanding music composition for a series.Photo: Courtesy of Unsplash Ted Lasso won the best comedy series prize at Monday night’s Emmy Awards, following last year’s win in the same category. “Thank you so much to everybody that’s watched this show. Thank you, everybody who voted for the show, thank you everybody that works on the show,” star Jason Sudeikis, who plays the titular character, said onstage. “Everybody in the offices of Warner Bros., Apple, Doozer, that answer all the calls. Everybody in production. Our COVID squad season two was huge. We didn’t have a single shutdown, and that was a lot because of what you men and women did for us. Everybody in postproduction that helps us out, that builds these amazing soccer stadiums, football stadiums around us. The show is about good and evil, and this show is about the truth of life. This show is about all that stuff, but it’s mostly about our response to those things. And your response to our show is overwhelming. ... We’ll see you for season three.” Other nominees for best comedy series were Abbott Elementary, Barry, Curb Your Enthusiasm, Hacks, The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel, Only Murders in the Building and What We Do in the Shadows. In the comedy categories, Ted Lasso also took home the prizes for best lead actor (Sudeikis) and best supporting actor (Brett Goldstein), as well as best comedy directing. Ted Lasso received a whopping 20 nominations this year. In the award show’s 74 years, only seven shows have won in their first season and then repeated to win for season two. Ted Lasso now joins Modern Family, 30 Rock, Frasier, The Golden Girls, Cheers, All in the Family and The Phil Silvers Show. In the Warner Bros. Television-produced series, Sudeikis plays an optimistic coach of a struggling college (American) football team who is hired to manage an English Premier League soccer club — despite having no experience with the sport — by the new owner in an attempt to sabotage the team. Sudeikis co-developed Ted Lasso using a character he first portrayed in a series of NBC sports promos in 2013. The 74th annual Emmy Awards were held at the Microsoft Theater in Los Angeles, California and were hosted by Kenan Thompson. Skip to content If you’re looking for a good laugh, HBO Max is a reliable one-stop shop for some of the best comedy series to binge, and EW is here to help make your way through the catalog. From Issa Rae’s latest project, Rap Sh!t — which is loosely based on the popular rap duo City Girls — to the Emmy-winning series Barry, we’ve gathered new standouts and old favorites for you to dig into. Whether you want something more satirical or just outright hysterical, here are the best comedies streaming on HBO Max right now. From one of the writers of Netflix’s Selena: The Series, Claudia Forestieri now, deservedly, steps into a creator role with Gordita Chronicles on HBO Max. The show follows a Dominican family assimilating to their new life in Miami after the father of the Castellì gets hired as a marketing executive at an airline in the city. The show, based on Forestieri’s own life experiences, is narrated by 12-year-old Cucu Castellì (Olivia Goncalves) who is actively discovering American customs — such as what we have for breakfast and how we drive — that many may see as commonplace, but she sees as a quirk from what she’s used to in the DR. The humor comes from the family — consisting of Cucu, father Victor (Juan Javier Cardenas), mother Adela (Diana-Maria Riva) and sister Emilia (Savannah Nicole Ruiz) — learning what it means to live in Miami while keeping the heart of the family beating. Despite the show being a critical success for the streamer, HBO Max said in a statement to EW on July 30 that Gordita Chronicles is being canceled. Executive producers Eva Longoria and Zoe Saldana said in a joint statement that they are “heartbroken” by HBO Max’s decision to steer away from family programming and let go of the series. “We continue to be blown away by the overwhelmingly positive critical response coupled with our growing audience numbers, which prove that viewers recognize the importance of this show’s existence and the crucial space it is filling for Latinx content in the media landscape.” Despite its cancellation, all 10 hilarious episodes of the series are still available to view on the streamer. If you liked Gordita Chronicles, you might also enjoy: One Day at a Time, streaming on Netflix. This buddy comedy features an unlikely pair: Ava (Hannah Einbinder), a millennial comedy writer ousted by the industry, and Deborah Vance (Jean Smart), a seasoned Las Vegas stand-up comedian. Luckily, their agent Jimmy (Paul W. Downs) brings the two together to help revamp Deborah’s career. Hacks is a witty comedy filled with humorous jabs between the leading ladies and unexpected situations that are beyond laughable — like being stranded in the middle of the desert and scrambling for ashes in a dumpster. Season two ended on a strong final bow in the finale, but despite the ending, the show just got a season three. Downs — who co-wrote the series with fellow creator (and his partner) Lucia Aniello — told EW that the conclusion of the second season was more so motivated by the story. “We wanted to feel like the desert and resolution and it was really satisfying,” he said. “And I think when you feel really satisfied at the end. It can often feel like something final...We feel like this is only the second chapter in a larger story that we want to tell.” If you liked Hacks, you might also enjoy: The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel, streaming on Amazon Prime Video. Rap Sh!t isn’t just for fans of rap and hip-hop, though it makes the genres near-irrististible as we meet the estranged high school duo of Shawna (Aida Osman), a college dropout eagerly pushing to get her socially conscious music off the ground, and Mia (KaMillion), a single mother trying to give her daughter the best life. As Issa Rae’s second project with HBO after the celebrated series Insecure, the show highlights the importance of friendship between Black women as we see the two Miami girls navigate their way into the music industry after their spontaneous rap on Instagram Live goes viral. The comedy series tells a story common for many female rappers today, more specifically, City Girls. In fact, Yung Miami and JT of the IRL rap duo are co-executive producers of the show. While it doesn’t document their specific rise to fame, Rap Sh!t gives viewers an inside look at what it takes to make it big, supplying plenty of reliable laughs along the way. If you liked Rap Sh!t, you might also enjoy: Atlanta, streaming on Hulu. The Rehearsal, a docu-comedy created, written, directed by, and starring Nathan Fielder, takes any and every possible awkward situation and pushes it to an extreme that can only keep laughs coming at every turn. Fielder’s deadpan comedy style is unlike your typical show, and perfectly complements the concept of the series: using HBO’s backing and budget to help real people practice difficult conversations and scenarios. While the person rehearses the conversation with an actor, Fielder stands nearby with a laptop in hand to direct them through the situation — definitely outlandish as it blurs the lines between sketches and realism, but that’s where the comedy thrives. From helping people admit to their lies to simulating life with a child for a woman looking to be a mother — real kids and all — the show will have your eyes widen with shock as you laugh, sometimes uncomfortably, but in the best way, along with Fielder’s schemes. If you liked The Rehearsal, you might enjoy: I Think You Should Leave, streaming on Netflix. If you’re looking for something with a little thrill without sacrificing humor, the Emmy-winning series Barry, created by Bill Hader, is the way to go. The comedy follows Barry Berkman (Hader), a hitman from Cleveland who travels to Los Angeles on assignment to kill his next victim, but ends up finding a new career path in the City of Angels: acting. As he tries to pursue his new passion on stage in Gene Cousineau’s (Henry Winkler) acting class, he must figure out how to cut his ties to his criminal past to take on a more enticing role. The third season, which premiered its last episode in June, has taken a brand new, more gut-wrenching tone as Barry embarks on a redemption arc. Fellow writer and producer of Barry, Alec Berg, told EW that the tone of atonement had been set up from the very beginning, and season 3 allowed them to take a deeper dive. “The idea of redemption and earning forgiveness and giving to others so that someone is let off the hook or doesn’t owe anyone... all that stuff started coalescing,” Berg said. “I wish I could say that we just sat down and went, ‘That’s it,’ and we wrote it. But it takes a lot of wandering in the desert to get to that.” If you liked Barry, you might also enjoy: Better Call Saul, streaming on Netflix. Joyce (Ophelia Lovibond) has an idea for a feminist magazine but there’s one problem: it isn’t marketable. When Doug (New Girl alum Jake Johnson) swoops in with an idea to put nude men in the magazine to get it on the shelves, she takes the suggestion and becomes and publisher of the first erotic magazine for women. Along with constant full-frontal male nudity (including a montage of flaccid penises auditioning for a part in the magazine) comes constant witty humor in Minx, a period dramedy that takes place in the 1970s. The series premiered on HBO Max in March 2022, concluded in April, and was renewed for season two by May — making it the perfect time to binge before the new season makes its way to the streaming service. Lovibond told EW that the comedy series also holds a message on the complexities of feminism that still applies today. “The things that we are talking about are still present 50 years later,” Lovibond said. “We’re still having those conversations, still having to argue for women’s right to choose. We’re still learning that feminism isn’t one-size-fits-all.” If you liked Minx, you might also enjoy: Love Life, streaming on HBO Max. Travel farther back in time to the 1700s with Our Flag Means Death, HBO Max’s pirate rom-com that has turned heads for its hilarious characters and significant LGBTQ+ representation. The energetic comedy is loosely based on the real-life Stede Bonnet (Rhys Darby) who left his lavish life in Barbados to prove himself as a pirate aboard the ship named “Revenge.” The cheeky farce featuring Taika Waititi as Blackbeard and Joel Fry as Frenchie also has a soft side, depicting heartfelt queer romances for its leading characters. The show has particularly been praised for its depiction of the LGBTQ+ community, including a nonbinary pirate aboard the ship played by Vico Ortiz. Ortiz told EW that part of what made their character, and the queer storylines, so authentic was the writers’ room that reflected the diversity on screen. “Well, when I first read the script, I cried. I was like, ‘I can’t believe that I’m not even asking for this to be a thing,’” Ortiz said. “In part, it’s because we had three non-binary writers in the writers’ room. So there’s already this character is being nurtured and taken care of. It’s not just like, ‘Oh, we’re going to hire a non-binary actor to do this. And then they’ll fend for themselves.” If you liked Our Flag Means Death, you might also enjoy: What We Do in the Shadows, streaming on Hulu. Tuca & Bertie strolls its way to Adult Swim (and HBO Max) for its second and third seasons after being canceled by Netflix following season one in 2019. From the mind of Bojack Horseman producer and production designer Lisa Hanawalt Tuca & Bertie follows the same animated comedic style, now in the form of human-sized birds and anthropomorphic plants. Tiffany Haddish voices Tuca, a spontaneous toucan, while Ali Wong plays Bertie, Tuca’s high-flying best friend and neighbor who is focused on her career. The comedy also features a star-studded supporting cast, including Steven Yeun, John Early, Richard E. Grant, and Reggie Watts. Hanawalt told EW that she wanted to create something like Broad City but in the realm of animation. There have been animated shows created by women, like Steven Universe, but being aimed at children, there’s limited potential for heavy and mature themes woven into relatable laughs. She wanted to have a comedic animation for adults that reflected the honest, yet comedic lives of women, such as the nuances of substance abuse and assault. “Tuca & Bertie is about women in their 30s and what that tension is going to look like as they part ways,” Hanawalt said. “I wanted a bit more conflict and tension between the characters.” If you liked Tuca & Bertie, you might also enjoy: Fairfax, streaming on Amazon Prime Video. SNL writer Sam Jay brings a late-night talk show comedy to HBO Max with PAUSE with Sam Jay. The series created by the comedian brings unfiltered conversations surrounding race to the table in amusing and often unexpected moments between friends. From casual conversations in her apartment to taking to the podium as a faux TV court judge, Sam has a witty take on exploring racism and homophobia through comedy, allowing people to laugh while those from the respective communities can air out how they’re feeling. Season two just finished airing on HBO in July 2022, giving you the perfect opportunity to binge if you’re looking for something that’ll jab on social issues in a witty and compassionate form. If you liked PAUSE with Sam Jay, you might also enjoy: Zize, streaming on Showtime. We’ve all seen the tween heartthrob make it big, but what about their adult siblings? The Other Two tackles this question with an angle on the absurd, going into the lives of Cary (Drew Tarver), a gay actor trying to make it big, and Brook (Helene Yorke), a former professional dancer, as they fall into the shadow of their successful kid brother Chase (Case Walker). To wrap up the Dubek family, Molly Shannon plays their mother who easily finds Chase to be her favorite child and uses her portion of the fame to become a successful daytime talk show host. The Other Two puts the family through absurd situations on their journey through fame, but along the way, they find triumphs as well. The Other Two may have aired its most recent season in 2021, but season three is coming up in September 2022. If you liked The Other Two, you might also enjoy: Search Party, streaming on HBO Max. © Copyright EW.com. All rights reserved.
